HIGH COURT—Original Jurisdiction.

NOTIFICATIONS.

The following rules have been passed by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, to take effect from the 1st day of July 1874.

R. BELCHAMBERS,

10th June 1874.

Registrar.

It is ORDERED that the following rules be read and passed as the rules and orders of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in its Original Jurisdiction, to take effect from the 1st day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four:—

Production and Inspection of Documents.

1. Copies of documents referred to in, and annexed to, a plaint as exhibits, may be furnished to a defendant on his entering his appearance.
Defendant may obtain copies of documents annexed to a plaint as exhibits.
2. Documents annexed to a plaint as exhibits, may be inspected by a defendant who has entered his appearance, on 24 hours' previous notice being given to the plaintiff or his attorney.
And may inspect such documents.
3. A plaintiff or a defendant may, at any stage of a suit, but, if required to file a written statement, not until after filing a sufficient written statement [unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise direct], be furnished with copies of documents annexed as exhibits to the written statement of the other party, and may inspect such documents, on 24 hours' previous notice being given to the party by whom such written statement has been filed.
Either party may obtain copies of documents annexed as exhibits to the written statement of the other party.
And may inspect such documents.

4. Until documents produced with a plaint, but not mentioned therein or annexed thereto as exhibits, have been offered and received in evidence, inspection thereof cannot be allowed, or copies thereof furnished, to a defendant without an order to be obtained under the following rules:—

5. A defendant may, at any stage of a suit, but, if required to file a written statement, not until after filing a sufficient written statement [unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise direct], apply by summons at Chambers for an order that he, his attorney, or agent, be at liberty to inspect and peruse the documents mentioned in and produced with a plaint, [but not annexed thereto as exhibits], and take copies and abstracts thereof, and extracts therefrom.
Defendant may inspect documents mentioned in and produced with a plaint, but not annexed thereto as exhibits;
And may obtain copies of such documents.

6. A plaintiff, or a defendant, may at any stage of a suit, but, if required to file a written statement, not until after filing a sufficient written statement [unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise direct], apply by summons at Chambers for an order that the other party do produce and leave with the Registrar, or produce at any other specified place, the documents mentioned in the plaint, or in the written statement of either party, [but not annexed as exhibits to or produced with the plaint, or annexed as exhibits to the written statement], and admitted to be in his possession or power: and that the applicant, his attorney, or agent, be at liberty to inspect and peruse the same, and take copies and abstracts thereof, and extracts therefrom.

7. A plaintiff, or a defendant, [a claimant under a decree in an administration suit being deemed a plaintiff], may, at any stage of a suit, in what manner, production obtained as between plaintiff and defendant.

but, if required to file a written statement, not until after filing a sufficient written statement [unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise direct], apply by summons at Chambers for an order that the other party do file an affidavit stating whether he has or has had in his possession or power any, and, if any, what, documents relating to the matters in question in the suit, and accounting for the same, and that he do within a given time produce and leave with the Registrar, or produce at any other specified place, such of the documents as by such affidavit shall appear to be in his possession, except such of the same, if any, as he may by his affidavit object to produce; and that the applicant, his attorney, or agent, be at liberty to inspect and peruse the documents so produced, and to take copies thereof and abstracts and extracts therefrom.

8. A defendant may, at any stage of a suit, but, if required to file a written statement, not until after filing a sufficient written statement [unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise order], apply by summons at Chambers as against any other defendant or defendants for an order similar to that to be obtained under the last preceding rule. The application must be supported by an affidavit, stating the interest of such co-defendant or co-defendants in the matter touching which discovery is sought, and the special facts and circumstances upon which the claim to obtain discovery from him or them is founded.

9. Except as provided in the last preceding rule, no affidavit is necessary in support of an application for discovery and consequential production and inspection, and the costs of any such affidavit will in future not be allowed, unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise order.

10. Where the production is sought from a corporation or company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or trustee, the affidavit will be directed to be made, on behalf of the corporation or company, by any director, secretary, or other principal officer of the corporation or company who may be able to depose to facts required to be stated in the affidavit.

11. The Court or a Judge may, for a sufficient reason, allow the affidavit to be made, on behalf of the party from whom production is sought, by any person competent to make the same.

12. The party required to make an affidavit must make the same, although he may have good grounds against producing the documents; and he must describe the documents with sufficient distinctness to enable the Court or a Judge to order production if his objections should be overruled.

13. All questions of privilege, exemption, sealing up, or production without leaving at the Registrar's Office, must be raised in the affidavit.

14. If extension of time for making the affidavit be required, the same may be obtained upon summons at Chambers.

15. No affidavit in answer to an affidavit, or further affidavit, made by the party from whom production is sought, or on his behalf, will be received.

16. If documents are claimed to be protected, the party seeking production, if desirous of raising the question, must do so by a further application for production. Such application must be made by summons, and may be heard before the Judge in Chambers, or adjourned to be heard in Court.

17. If the affidavit be considered insufficient as not containing a clear admission or denial of the possession of documents, or such a description of them that the Court can enforce its order, or from any other cause, the party seeking production may obtain a summons to consider the sufficiency of the affidavit.

18. If the affidavit be held to be insufficient, further time may, at the discretion of the Judge, be allowed to the deponent to file a full and sufficient affidavit; and such time may be further extended on his application by summons. If further time be not allowed, the deponent will be liable to process of contempt for disobedience, as if no affidavit had been filed.

19. If it appears from the affidavit of the party from whom production is sought, that the books and papers relating to the matters in question are in constant use in his business, and necessary for that purpose, or cannot be deposited without great inconvenience, the order, in the first instance, will only direct that they shall be produced for inspection at the place of business at which they are stated to be in use or other convenient place.

20. If the statements in the affidavit in support of a claim to seal up documents, or if the unsealed documents, or plaint, or written statement afford grounds for suspecting that the party has sealed up matter that ought to have been disclosed, the party seeking inspection may apply, by summons, for inspection of the documents which have been sealed, and the Judge may unseal such documents and examine them in order to see whether the applicant is entitled to inspect the portions sealed up.

MEMO. No. 1689.

The following Circular issued by the Registrar of Her Majesty's Privy Council, is published for general information.

By Order of the High Court,

HIGH COURT, } H. J. S. COTTON,
The 22nd June 1874. } Offg. Registrar.

The Registrar of the Privy Council, to the Solicitors and Agents conducting Appeals before Her Majesty in Council.

COUNCIL OFFICE, WHITEHALL,
The 22nd December 1873.

GENTLEMEN,

I am directed by the Lord President of the Council to state for your information that it appears from a communication made by the Incorporated Law Society to the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that a practice exists amongst some of the solicitors or agents conducting Appeals from India before the Privy Council, of allowing a payment or commission of 10 or 15 per cent. on the remittances made to defray the expenses in England, to the Vakeel, Mookhtear, or other person in India by whom the Appeal is transmitted to this country; and in one instance their Lordships are informed that a direct solicitation of business accompanied an offer of these terms.

Their Lordships have taken these statements into their most serious consideration. It appears to their Lordships that the deduction of a commission from remittances made for the expenses of an Appeal cannot justly be assimilated to the division of profits which prevails in this country under the name of agency; it is immaterial to a suitor in what manner the lawful costs he has to pay are divided between a town and country solicitor, but he has a right to require that remittances made for the expenses of an Appeal to England should be exclusively applied without deduction to that purpose. The payment to the Native Vakeel, or other adviser of the client in India, of a commission upon the remittances, not only tends to increase the expense of Appeals, but gives to such persons direct personal interest in advising frivolous Appeals, and in making them as expensive as possible. Their Lordships are therefore of opinion that, if such a practice exists in India or elsewhere, it is wrong, and open to grave abuse, which might, if continued, call for the direct interposition of their Lordships' authority to check it.

But their Lordships prefer to address themselves to the sense of professional duty and propriety which exists amongst the gentlemen carrying on the business of Appeals before Her Majesty in Council, to put an end to this system; and their Lordships trust that after this intimation of their opinion measures will be taken by the members of the profession practising in the Privy Council to prevent the continuance of any such practice, which has doubtless only prevailed in some exceptional cases and should now be entirely abandoned.

I have, &c.,

"Subject to the approval of subscribers, they have admitted to the benefits of the Fund the following families:—"

"An application has been received from Mr. A. L. Clay for the remission of a fine of Rs. 50, incurred under Article V (6) of the Rules, for reporting his marriage two days after the expiry of the month's grace allowed."

"Mr. Clay pleads, that had he reported his marriage, which took place in England on the 16th September, within the prescribed month, by letter, the notice would not have reached the Fund Office sooner than his report dated the 17th October last, which was made immediately upon his arrival in India. The managers recommend this case for the favorable consideration of the meeting."

"Mr. F. R. Hogg has reported that he has obtained a divorce from his wife and has applied to subscribe at reduced rates as a widower subscriber. The managers have informed him that the date from which widower rates of subscription become payable, is the date on which the "decree nisi" is made absolute, or six months after the date of the decree."

"The managers have received a memorial from Mrs. Boldero, Mrs. Paton, and Mrs. Turner, widows of subscribers and incumbents on the Fund, praying that an increase of their respective pensions may be granted to them out of the surplus. Mrs. Boldero in 1870 sent a similar memorial, which was laid before a General Meeting, and it was resolved to inform her that the subscribers were unable to comply with the prayer of her memorial. The ladies have now been informed that the managers cannot disturb the resolution passed at the General Meeting of 1870."

"The votes of the subscribers have affirmed the resolution passed respecting the addition to Article II of the Rules of the words noted on the margin. The votes were 127 in favor of the amendment and 21 against it."

"The votes on the resolution, that the service concurs in the views adopted by the Secretary of State both in 1865 and 1872, as to the inapplicability of the present conditions of the Civil Fund to native covenanted civilians, and the expediency of expunging from the covenants of such civilians the engagements relating to the Civil Fund, were—for the resolution, 128; against it, 22."

"The three native gentlemen, who were members of the service in May 1872, have been informed of their admission as subscribers to the Fund, and the managers have likewise intimated the result of the voting to the Government of India in the Home Department."

"The managers, in their circular of 15th November last, stated that a reference had been made to the Actuary regarding the Fund Surplus, and Messrs. Coutts & Co., the Agents of the Fund, have reported that they are now in communication with Mr. Brown regarding the valuation of its assets and liabilities."

"On the 28th August last, the managers issued a circular to the service on the subject of the disposable surplus. This circular was accompanied by two forms, in which they sought to obtain an expression of the opinion of the service at large, with reference to the benefits which the surplus should be applied to securing, and the order of priority in which those benefits should be considered."

"For the reasons set out in their subsequent circular of the 15th November, they have determined to make no motion at present for the appropriation of surplus, but will move instead the following resolution:—"

"That any increase of benefits which may be declared as the result of the reference now made to the Actuary, shall have effect from the 1st April 1873."

"The accounts of the year 1872-73 are submitted."

1. It was proposed by Mr. Field, and seconded by Mr. C. J. Lyall, and carried "that the proceedings of the Managers, in respect of the admission of families to the benefits of the Fund during the past half-year, be confirmed."

2. It was proposed by Mr. Barbour, and seconded by Mr. Field, and carried "that the fine imposed upon Mr. A. L. Clay, be remitted."

3. It was moved by Mr. Monro, and seconded by Mr. O'Kinealy, and carried "that the reply given by the Managers to Mesdames Boldero, Paton and Turner, be approved."

4. It was moved by Mr. H. L. Johnson, seconded by Mr. Field, and carried "that the following gentlemen be appointed Managers for the present year:—Messrs. Schalch, Geoghegan, O'Kinealy, Cotton and Abbott."

5. Mr. Schalch then moved on behalf of the Managers,—“that any increase of benefits which may be declared as the result of the reference now made to the actuary have effect from the 1st April 1873.” He said, the Managers had, as they promised, yielded to the wish of the majority, as regards refraining from making any change in the benefits until the actuary's report is received, and had adopted the above resolution which would, he hoped, satisfy all parties.

Mr. Cotton said he rose to propose a Resolution, (which he would put as an amendment) that had been duly advertised before the publication of the Managers' Resolution:—

“That no surplus be declared or distributed, and that no scheme for increase of benefits or reduction of subscription be allowed to come into force until after reference to a professional actuary; provided that any benefits that may be distributed shall have retrospective effect from the 1st April 1873.”

It had been urged that he should withdraw his Resolution as being substantially the same as the Resolution proposed by the Managers; but if the Resolution were substantially the same, he did not, he said, see why the Managers should not accept the terms of his Resolution, as he had been the first to advertise. He regretted on principle to oppose the Managers on what might almost appear to be a matter of form, but in point of fact it was, as he would show, of importance to adhere to the exact words of his Resolution. There were other Resolutions, to follow which it was essential to read with the Resolution he was then proposing. He was aware that the Managers had already referred the fund accounts to an actuary for a valuation in October last, while the whole question was still under discussion, and he much regretted that they had done so, as he thought that all the circumstances had not been properly stated in that reference, and he could not accept that reference as final. In the Resolution just proposed by Mr. Schalch, the words “the reference now made to the actuary” were used, and he could not stultify all the action he and his party had been taking by accepting a Resolution so expressed. The valuation of the Fund would, he hoped, again be referred to the actuary, and certain information and facts would then be supplied which had not been given in the reference of last October. He had already in the General Meeting held in July 1873, dwelt at length on the grounds of the Resolution he was now proposing, and he would not trouble the meeting by repeating them on this occasion.

Mr. Daukes seconded the amendment.

Some discussion ensued, in the course of which it was pointed out that the reference to the actuary was not final in its terms, but that he was told “further information would be sent as to the opinions of the service” on the very subjects now under agitation. It was objected that the circulars of Mr. Cotton's party were not among the documents forwarded to the actuary with the Managers' letter of reference, although the Managers, in their circular issued last autumn under the Officiating Secretary Mr. Monro's signature, had said that they were “prepared to forward any representations on the part of members of the service, which are not inconsistent with the known circumstances of the Fund, and which are supported otherwise than by merely general assertions at variance with specific facts within the knowledge of the Managers.” To this it was replied that no request had been made that they should be forwarded, and that they had never been formally communicated to the Managers, who found them moreover both inaccurate and misleading. Mr. Cotton rejoined that he had assumed after the Managers' pledge that they would have forwarded the circulars referred to without a special request to that effect; and he pointed out that on an application from Mr. Westland he had formally supplied that gentleman with several copies of the second circular, when he, Mr. Westland, was in charge of the Fund Office.

The Secretary read the following extract from the reference to the actuary that had been made as showing that attention had been drawn to the points under discussion:—“It has been said above that the promotion in the three branches of the service (Bengal, North-Western Provinces and Punjab) is not parallel. It is right to inform the actuary that there is very considerable agitation at present among the Junior Civilians in the North-Western Provinces, who allege that their position and prospects as regards salary are considerably worse than those of their brethren in other provinces. It will be for the actuary to say, with reference to the facts, whether it would be safer to frame different subscription value tables for the different provinces, or whether it is sufficient to take one, an average one, for the whole service. In any case, the question of the valuation of future subscriptions should, both on account of the largeness of the item and on account of its complication, have the best attention of the actuary. * * *

“He should advise also how much of a margin it would be safe to keep in distributing the surplus. The recent papers of the fund specified on the margin will be a guide to the actuary as to the details that are wanted in respect of this subject of reference, and further information will be sent as to the opinions of the service when they are collected.”

Mr. Cotton then pressed his amendment which was carried—the voting being for it, 12 present and 154 proxies = 166 against it, 15 “ and 71 “ = 86

6. Mr. Verner then moved and Mr. Barbour seconded a further resolution, viz:—

“That in referring to the actuary for a valuation of the fund, he be supplied with information showing in detail the grounds for apprehending a future decrease in the average gross salaries of subscribers during their term of service, and that his advice be obtained as to the surplus which should reasonably remain undistributed as a margin to ensure the solvency of the fund.”

Mr. Verner said—He thought that there was good reason to apprehend a decrease in the average gross salaries of subscribers during their term of service. True, a table published by the managers had shown a decrease comparatively small during the last twenty years, but the fact was that the furlough rules of 1868 in their early operation had temporarily counterbalanced the other causes at work. This disturbing element could not continue, and as it disappeared average salaries would again steadily decline. There was another important consideration. The Secretary of State had about three years ago made a concession to the service, one for which he need hardly say the rank and file of the service were deeply grateful. He alluded to the orders guaranteeing the full pension of one thousand a year on the completion of twenty-five years service. Experience was wanting to enable us to predicate the effect of this order on the average term of service, but it might be conjectured with a fair show of reason that it would induce early retirements. The managers had remarked in one of their circulars that the fund was scarcely affected if the average term of service were reduced by a year, but he need hardly observe that this was fallacious. The effect of such an average reduction would be to leave the assets of the fund very much as they were, and to increase its liabilities considerably. He therefore thought it very necessary that the probable effect upon the fund of the boon conceded by the Secretary of State should be provided for. There were other important considerations pointing to a decrease in average salaries, but these had already been dwelt upon in the circulars signed by himself and others, and he need not repeat them.

Mr. Schalk moved as an amendment "that the Actuary be informed of any grounds that can be stated for apprehending a future decrease in the rate of income of subscribers during their term of service, and that his advice be obtained whether it would be equitable and expedient to reserve for such a contingency part of any surplus that may be found now to exist, and how much should be so reserved."

He said, that the amendment as drafted by the Managers differed from the Resolution mainly in drawing the attention of the Actuary to the question of the equity and expediency of reserving for such a future contingency any part of the savings effected in the past from the subscriptions of old members for the benefit of those who were to come after. It was true that future subscriptions of members were taken into account in arriving at the surplus, but the members who had borne the heavy rates of subscription for so long should get the full benefit of them. It was for the Actuary, who dealt with such questions constantly, to say what was fair in this view.

Mr. O'Kinealy in seconding the amendment said—

That the statements made us regards the average decrease in the subscriptions of members during the last 23 years were wholly incorrect. As a fact, the average yearly salary of each member for the whole period was 16,746 rupees, which is only 24 rupees more than the salary for 1872-73. But there was a much better example to show that we are not in a worse position than formerly. During the five years 1863-68, we accumulated about 23 lacs of rupees, and yet the average salary for that period was only 16,267 rupees, which is less by 455 rupees than the salary of last year. So far as to the diminution in the salaries of civilians. Then as to the distribution of the surplus, he thought those who had subscribed the money should obtain the benefit of it, and these were the present members of the fund. He considered it hard that the surplus should be retained to assist future subscribers who had nothing to do with it. As regards this all present subscribers were on the same footing; but in addition to this, the proposal pressed exceedingly hard on men of about 20 years' standing in the service. They had formerly subscribed largely to make up a deficit caused by the action of their predecessors, and now they were being compelled to create a sinking fund for the benefit of future subscribers. He deemed the proposal unjust and unfair, and would vote against it.

Mr. Cotton said it was absurd to refer questions of equity to the Actuary, and were there no other reasons for opposing the Manager's amendment, he would not hesitate to oppose it on that ground alone.

The amendment was then put and lost, there being for it (16 present and 71 proxies=) 87 votes and against it (14 present and 154 proxies=) 168 votes.

The Resolution was carried by (14 present and 154 proxies=) 168 votes to (13 present and 71 proxies=) 84 votes.

7. Mr. Abbott then proposed and Mr. Porter seconded a Resolution—

"That a Committee representing all grades of the Service be appointed to assist the Managers in giving effect to the second Resolution, to consist of the following gentlemen:—

HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE JACKSON,	MR. T. W. RAWLINS,
MR. H. G. KEENE,	" W. H. VERNER,
" T. B. TRACEY,	" E. H. HARRISON,
" A. H. HARRINGTON,	" J. S. MACKINTOSH,
	" A. W. MACKIE,

with power to add to their number. This Committee he was proposing represented not only all grades of the Service, but almost all parts of India in which Members of the Service were employed; he trusted that it was thoroughly representative and as such would be accepted without opposition.

Mr. Menro rose to oppose the resolution. He said—

The proposal to form a committee is certainly unusual, if not almost unprecedented, and some pressing necessity must have arisen to require the adoption of such an unusual course. He wished to know whether the proposal referred to the past or the future. If it had any reference to the past, then it was practically a vote of want of confidence in, and censure of the proceedings of, the Managers of the past year. If this was so, then he said that the grounds of this want of confidence should be clearly laid before the meeting; that the Managers of the past year might have an opportunity of meeting any accusations which may be brought against them, and that the vote of want of confidence, if deserved, might be recorded by the Service.

If the proposal referred to the future, then it seemed to him unintelligible. It was practically a vote of want of confidence in Managers, who had only just been elected, who had not yet been tried, who had not yet failed in discharging any of the duties entrusted to them. It was really a declaration that the members of the Service cannot find in the Service five men whom they can trust to represent them, and it was a proposal to supplement the deficiencies of these five men whom they cannot trust, by adding to their number some more men out of the same untrusted service.

He would be much surprised if any gentlemen could be found to consent to serve as managers under such conditions, and he was still more surprised to find that there were any members of the service who expected that they would meet with managers to take office when they were not to be trusted without a committee to serve as a sort of security or safeguard, that the Managers would do their duty. To be a Manager under such circumstances was in his opinion discreditable to the individual, but to expect to find such Managers was little short of an insult to the Service. Apart from the bearing of the question on past or future managers, the proposal to appoint an auxiliary committee seemed to him to be a declaration of want of confidence in ourselves as a service which was much to be deplored. It was practically an admission that we were not able to manage the affairs of our fund under the system of management which at present is in force, and which has all along prevailed. If this declaration of incapacity to manage our affairs should be affirmed by the vote of the meeting, then it seemed to him that the dissolution of the Civil Fund under its present system of management was not far off. And he for one would not be sorry if under such circumstances the dissolution were a speedy one, and if the management of the fund were assumed by some one who would be able to manage it without fear of votes of want of confidence, and without the assistance of auxiliary committees."

A somewhat animated discussion followed, in the course of which Mr. Barbour said that "he intended to support the Resolution but did not look upon it as a vote of censure on the managers or as implying any want of confidence in their desire to do what they thought best for the whole service, but it was however the fact that they were taken solely from men stationed in Calcutta and owing to the nature of the election were chosen solely by the votes of those present in meeting. The interests of the managers thus elected did not always coincide with those of officers in the mofussil and in other provinces: and were in fact in some instances directly opposed to them. It was of great importance that officers in the mofussil and of other provinces should have an opportunity of authoritatively expressing their views and on that ground he would support the Resolution." Mr. Cotton on the other hand asserted that the gentlemen he represented did in fact not repose full confidence in the Fund management. The managers had, he thought, acted throughout on a onesided view of the case and without regard to the interests of the majority of the service, and though offering to conform to the views of the service, were now in reality opposing them. Even on the newly elected management the majority of subscribers would still be represented by a minority of managers. Mr. O'Kinealy and others said that the course adopted was laying down a dangerous precedent and was meaningless, as implying distrust of the newly elected managers.

Mr. Field proposed and Mr. Dampier seconded an amendment to the following effect:—

"That the managers appointed this day be requested, if they see fit, to appoint a committee representing all grades of the service to assist them in giving effect to the foregoing Resolution."

Mr. Field begged to express an opinion that the appointment of a committee such as that proposed would be ultra vires. Article XXIII of the rules ran as follows:—"The affairs of the fund shall be conducted by nine managers, &c." There was no provision for appointing a committee which should either control or supersede or assist the managers. It was of course possible to alter this rule, but until it was altered, he thought they could not take such a course as that proposed. Looking at the question in another point of view, it appeared to him and would probably appear to most persons that the appointment of a committee for the object mentioned in the proposition before the meeting amounted to an expression of want of confidence in the managers who had just been elected for the current year. The managers appointed under the rule just referred to, had always conducted the affairs of the fund to the satisfaction of the service at large, and he deprecated doing anything which must to outsiders have the semblance of want of confidence in the management as constituted under a set of rules which had hitherto worked satisfactorily. He thought that the course which had been pursued with respect to the real question at issue showed that the managers did not wish to set up their own views in opposition to those of a majority of the service. On the contrary they had deferred to the wishes of the service as soon as they were clearly made known to them, and no reason had been afforded so far as the present question was concerned of superseding the system of management which had been in existence for so many years. The managers just appointed numbered amongst them some of the gentlemen, who had raised the discussion which led to the propositions laid before today's meeting,—and he did not anticipate that they would act otherwise than their predecessors had done. On the contrary he believed that any representations made to them, or information supplied, would receive due consideration, and would, if desired, be incorporated into any reference to be made to the actuary. If they acted otherwise, the service were strong enough to secure attention to views held by a majority of them, and which they wished to have represented to the actuary, as in their opinion having an important bearing on the subject which he had to consider. If, however, it did seem desirable to any that a committee should be appointed, it appeared to him that the constitutional and proper way of obtaining the services of such a committee was to request the managers to appoint a committee to assist them, and therefore he begged to propose the amendment."

Mr. L. Johnson suggested that the Resolution might go to the meeting, as it was optional to the managers to accept the assistance offered. Mr. Schalch said that speaking as a manager, he was quite willing to give assistance to any committee that the subscribers might appoint, but he objected to having a committee set to work as part of the management. The managers were quite ready, if requested, to forward to the Actuary any representation that any individual member or any body of members might draw up. He objected personally to a committee in any shape as quite unnecessary, but would move as an amendment, that the proposition run simply "that a committee representing all grades of the service be appointed to give effect to the above resolution."

Mr. Mackenzie seconded this.

Mr. Field's amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. Cotton said he had no objection to accept Mr. Schalch's amendment as a compromise provided that it was understood that if that amendment were lost the original Resolution should be put, and after some conversation, it was adopted by Mr. Cotton's party and substituted with Mr. Schalch's consent for the original motion; being moved by Mr. C. J. Lyall and seconded by Mr. Verner. On being put to the vote there appeared only 7 votes present in favour of it, a number which excludes proxies, and 15 against it.

Several gentlemen protested against the result, saying the nature of the motion as put by the Chairman had not been understood, and Mr. Abbott said he should now press his original motion. Further discussion followed.

Mr. Dampier said "on looking at the names of the proposed committee, he felt that save as to one or two of them he must ask whether the proposer could for a moment profess that they had been impartially selected. He believed they were nearly all men pledged to one view of the question, and it was absurd to pretend that they were impartial assessors chosen to promote its calm and deliberate consideration. It would be much better to oblige the managers to recognise them for what they were, the chosen representatives of a large number of subscribers who held one view on the surplus question. As the managers just elected were prepared to recognise any outside committee and to deal with them as representatives of a large body of subscribers, he thought the party who pressed for their appointment should be content with that, and agree to have all this discussion cut out of the proceedings. The objections of Messrs. Monro and O'Kinealy and others would in this way be met; for veil it as you might the meaning of the Resolution as put was to appoint a committee of vigilance to watch the management."

Mr. Ditcheson said—

"He craved permission to say a single word, although he had no proposition to lay before the meeting. His earnest counsel was that the members present should avoid pressing any motion on this subject likely to create a breach in the service. In the hope that it might contribute a little to this desirable end, he would mention what happened some ten years ago in a similar case. In 1862 it was believed that there existed a considerable surplus to the credit of the fund, and proposals were brought forward by the managers for a distribution of the benefit much in the way now done. He was one of several very junior members of the service who doubted the existence of the surplus, and simply as an individual member of the service having an interest in the question, he wrote a letter to the managers setting forth his views. These views were crude and not worth much, but such as they were they received the most courteous and considerate treatment at the hands of the managers, who immediately set about the most careful examination of the whole subject. This examination resulted in the production by Mr. Monteath, then Secretary, of his well-known report which has been pronounced by professional men at home one of the most valuable papers that could be laid before an Actuary. He was sure that the managers of the present day were actuated by the same spirit as in 1862, that they would give courteous consideration to the views of any member of the service which were laid before them in a proper way; and that they would furnish to any one who asked them every possible facility for estimating the real state of the fund. There was nothing to prevent committees being formed at all the chief seats of the Local Governments for the purpose of carrying out these enquiries; and the managers, as they had been assured by Mr. Schaleh, would give every possible assistance in the prosecution of them. But it was a different thing for the service by their votes officially to appoint what was really a committee of vigilance to watch over the managers in the performance of their duty. Such a measure was as unworthy of the service as it must be humiliating to the managers. He would earnestly advise that the proposal be not passed."

Mr. Field "strongly urged that the meeting should rest satisfied with the assurance given them by a gentleman who was a manager for the past year, and had been re-elected for the current year. For himself he had full confidence in that assurance. He believed that the great object at the present stage of the whole question was to open a door for full and free discussion of the question in all its bearings and as it affected all, and to secure that all grades of the service should have a fair hearing for their representations. He believed that if the managers acted up to the assurance they had just heard, this would be accomplished, and he desired to see it accomplished without doing violence to the old system of management, and taking a course that must appear to outsiders as the creation of an opposition within the service itself. He stood himself between both parties, and his personal interests were fairly divided on both sides of the question. Admitting the principle, he thought the real point of difficulty would be the application of that principle, and this would depend upon the result of figures not yet made clear, and into which it was almost impossible for a number of gentlemen at a meeting like the present to enter effectually. He had not yet made up his mind as to what ought to be done when these results were fully known, but he wished that the whole question should be gone into in the light of the fullest information. It might be that the fund ought not to be regarded as an Insurance Society merely, but there must be some limit to the application of the principle of continuity. It was admitted that gentlemen now in the service had, by their contributions, filled up a deficit which had existed before their time, and in creating which they had had no share. It would be too much to ask these gentlemen to pay also for advantages to be enjoyed by those who came after them, advantages which their own subscriptions could never procure for them. Where the line was to be drawn and at what point hardship would begin to be inflicted upon any portion of the existing members of the service, were matters on which it was impossible to form an opinion until the completion of the enquiry about to be made by the actuary. He for one wished that enquiry to be as full as possible and founded on the fullest information, and this was all the meeting really ought to see provided for. He believed the assurance he had already referred to, and that all that was desirable would be done by the managers first appointed; and he advised the withdrawal of the motion for a committee."

Further conversation followed,—in the course of which it appeared that it had not been ascertained that all the gentlemen nominated to the committee would consent to act. At length it was arranged that Mr. Abbott's resolution should again be put, omitting the names of the committee, and also omitting the words, "the managers" i.e., in precisely the same form as Mr. Schaleh's amendment. The votes being again taken, there were for it (10 present and 154 proxies=) 164 and against it (15 present and 71 proxies=) 86.

8. Mr. O'Kinealy addressed the chair on a personal matter. He had been that day elected a manager; but with reference to the resolution just carried he would beg to resign his place as manager.

Mr. Trevor Grant was thereupon elected a manager in Mr. O'Kinealy's place.

The meeting then terminated.
